Let me tell you about how the First nations make their clothing First nations would use the fur of bison and dry it and make it into leather. Then they will sew it With Porcupine quills and make mocasins, shirts hats and sweaters. Metis dye their clothing with dried berries and blood for paint. And metisn Would put bee'ds on their shoes to make shapes like flowers leaves And berries.First nations will sometimes sew fur on their clothing so it would Make them warmer when it gets colder.First nations would not dye their Clothing because they move around alot so they don't have the time to Get dry berries.

You'll be excited to learn about the First Nations Clothing.

Do you realize that, there are two types of bones? Those two types of bones are the Diaphysis and the Epiphysis.Those two types of bones are different when people are growing up.While They grow up the bones become bigger.

It's hard to believe, But the First Nations used dyed Moose hair for decorating their clothing.The First Nations Basically Hunt Moose a lot.

Surprisingly, Both men and women from the First nations groups wore trousers. But women wore dresses over their trousers.Trousers are basically pants for the First Nations culture.

First Nations used Elk,Bison,Rabbit,Coyotes, and even Grizzly Bears for their clothing.

The First Nations used all of the the Bison for different things.They even used a tongue for a spoon.

First Nations used Rocks for hammers.I can't believe that they used all sorts of things for different use of a lot things.

Let me tell you about First Nations clothes.

Did you know that the First Nations clothes look very different than our clothes. This is because they lived when they had to use every part of the animals they hunted and they didn't have the machines we have to make clothes.

Surprisingly the first nations wore trousers like we do. This is because the nomadic bison users need pants.

Amazingly when the first nations wanted their clothes to have color they dyed their clothes or put beads on their clothes. This is because these spiritual story tellers don't want all their clothes to look the same.

Interestingly the First Nations made clothes out of animal skin. This is because they don't have time to make clothes out of cotton.
